A FRIENDLY MAN FROM CHICAGO.

Arrested for Annoying the Goulds-He May Call Upon Mr. Depew Next.

New York Sun. Henry L. Spring is twenty-nine years old. He says he is a Chicago real-estate dealer. He has qualities that one would look for in a Chicago real-estate dealer. While the Gould family were at the world's fair be made the acquaintance of some of them. Last Saturday he came to New York to let them find a job for him and lend

He is a wonderful talker, has no chin to speak of, wears good clothes and smiles incessantly. He succeeded once in penetrating into the office of the Goulds at 195 Broad way. The rest of his time he has spens in seeking interviews with Edwin Gould and an introduction to George Gould, and in sending letters and notes asking for advice and the loan of $25. He was so persistent that detectives Hanley and Crowley were called in. With them he went before Justice Martin at the Tombs yester-

"I thought that possibly the influence of the Goulds might help me a little," he explained. "Are they friends of yours?" asked the

"Well, the fact is-I am not acquainted with George Gould, but Howard and Ed know very well.

"They are very charming people," the man went on glibly, "and, though they counseled me to remain in the West, inasmuch as I was Western born, I decided to try my fortune in new fields. I like your beautiful city very much, and I thought that, with such backing as the Goulds would give and my friends the Astorsthey were at the fair, too-I would be on the way to success from the very start." "Yes. I think you might," the justice said: "but you know it is not polite to annoy business men during office hours." "If that is the case, I shall of course desist. I presumed that they would be glad to help me, and now I perceive that my presumption was a mistake. I regret is excoedingly."

"My advice to you as a police justice is not to go there any more. "Very well. I shall be obliged to seek enocess elsewhere. I know Chauncey Depew slightly. His brother gave me a pass "You are discharged," said Justice Mar-

"Good day, sir," Spring rejoined, blandly, As he left the court room he drew out a sheet of paper and ran his finger down a list. It contained the names of W. C. Whitney, W. Rockefeller, Hamilton Fish. Oliver Sumner Teall and others. The Justice called him back. "Promise me that you will annoy no other men as long as you are in the city." be said. "But I am sure that some of these men would like to help a pure-minded young man to a position," the friendly man replied, "but I suppose I shall have to give up my cherished plan and leave your beautiful city.

Under the Egyptian columns of the Tombs he shook hands with the detectives effusively and thanked them for being so trienaly.

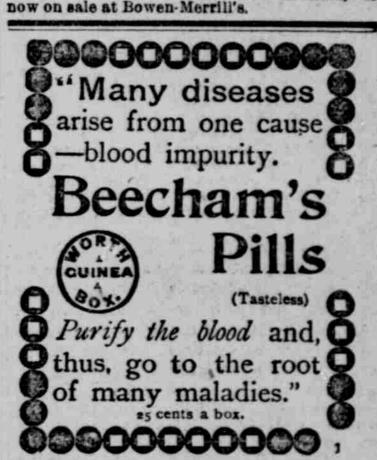

The Boy Was Puzzied.

Boston Post. A woman of my acquaintance had occa-sion to call on Dr. Mary Walker, at the Crawford House, the day after the little doctor arrived at that hostelry, and before one little bell-boy had altogether settled in his mind the precise gender of this veteran dress-reformer in trousers. "Is Dr. Mary Walker stopping heref" inquired she, and the bell-boy answered eagerly; "Yes'um, I seen him. He came last "Will you take her my card?" she asked The boy looked at her doubtfully, and gravely, holding out the bit of pasteboard. then went down the corridor. In a few moments he came back, a deeply injured expression on his face. "He wasn't in his room," said the boy bewilderedly, "and the clerk says she's gone out."
